CPRN's Family Network Has a New Director

Tuesday, May 25, 2004 – Judith Maxwell, President of CPRN, is pleased to announce the appointment of David Hay as Director of the Family Network. He will take over from Jane Jenson, who has held that post for the past five years.

"We are thrilled to have a person with David's interests and experience join us," Mrs. Maxwell said. "I am sure he will continue the tradition of innovative contributions to Canadian social policy for which the Family Network is well known."

David Hay is currently the Manager of Reports and Analysis for the Canadian Population Health Initiative at the Canadian Institute for Health Information. David is responsible for coordinating knowledge exchange and public engagement strategies for CPHI to stimulate debate and dialogue about the determinants of health. He led the research, writing and production of CPHI's recently released national population health report, Improving the Health of Canadians 2004.

David has many years of experience researching and writing about population health, well-being, and social development in the private, public and non-profit sectors. His areas of expertise include child and family policy, poverty and inequality, and measurement and evaluation.

David's undergraduate (BA) and graduate education (MSc, PhD) is in psychology, sociology, social policy, philosophy, and community health.

David has had affiliations with a number of social policy organizations and projects in a voluntary capacity, including: as a director of the Canadian Council on Social Development; a founding member of Campaign 2000 to End Child Poverty in Canada; and, as president of the Greater Victoria Child and Youth Advocacy Society.

David will take up his new post here in July.

We welcome him to CPRN!
